

THE TREND

While sleek European kitchens will always have their place, there's been a move toward embracing organic materials in the kitchen—and not just for cabinetry. "Organic textures and nature-inspired colors literally ground you and bring you back to earth," says interior designer Jennifer Robin (jrobininteriors.com), who created the Napa Valley kitchen at right with Wade Design Architects (wade-design.com). "When current affairs feel so uncertain, these qualities of an interior are what people will be yearning for—a sort of visual meditation to calm the senses."

THE DETAIL

Inspired by the redwood trees surrounding the home, Robin used copper accents to complement the reclaimed wood and forest green cabinetry seen throughout the kitchen. "We wanted to blur the lines between inside and outside and create a space that was earthy and organic but still sophisticated."

